

Shah rally gets nod after he dares Mamata to arrest him

FPJ NEWS SERVICE
Kolkata

Upping the ante, a combative BJP president Amit Shah has said he will definitely hold a rally in Kolkata on August 11 and dared the state government to arrest him, after his party leaders claimed that the local police had not yet given permission for the event.

"It does not matter whether I get permission or not, I will definitely go to Kolkata. If the state government wants, it can arrest me," Shah was quoted as saying by ANI.

After Shah's dare, the Bengal police clarified that no rally request had been turned down. "Amit Shah can go wherever he wants. Who is stopping him," Mamata Banerjee told NDTV between her rounds of meetings with opposition leaders, including L K Advani. Four years ago, Kolkata's civic body had refused permission to Amit Shah for a rally. The BJP finally obtained permission from the Calcutta High Court. Shah's proposed rally underscores his intention to build the issue as a major poll plank in Mamata's state as Lok Sabha elections are barely eight months away. As of now, the BJP has minimal presence in the state assembly with just three seats. In 2014, the party won just two Lok Sabha seats from the state. But over the last two years, the BJP has managed to dislodge the Left and become the main opposition party in the state.

The fresh flare up between Shah and Banerjee comes amid a war of words over the National Register of Citizen issue in Assam. Both leaders have accused each other of compromising national interests for the sake of vote-bank politics.

SC won't make adultery law an offence for women

AGENCIES
New Delhi

The Supreme Court five-judge Constitution bench headed by Chief Justice Dipak Misra on Wednesday indicated that it will not touch the adultery law to make it an offence for women, too. Rather, it will examine if it should remain a criminal offence at all.

Section 497 of the IPC makes adultery an offence only with respect to a man who has a relationship with somebody's wife. The wife is considered neither adulterous nor an abettor in law, while the man faces a jail term of up to five years.

Another peculiar aspect of Section 497 is the fact that the bottom falls out of the offence if consent or connivance of the husband can be established.

The Bench, citing this part of the 15-year-old law, on Wednesday said that the entire Section will be struck down if it is held violative of right to equality of women, who are treated inferior to their husbands.

During the brief hearing, the Bench further observed that adultery is already a ground of divorce.

A PIL moved by a Kerala native Joseph Shine has urged the apex court to take a relook at the validity of Section 497 on the grounds that it was discriminatory and carried gender bias. It also pointed out that a complete immunity from criminal prosecution was sought to be given to women under Article 15(3), which is primarily meant for granting affirmative rights to certain sections but not to shield them from prosecution.

HC relief for...

Anderson, the prime accused in the gas leak case, never returned to face trial. He died in the US in 2013. On November 19, 2016 the CJM ordered registration of a case against Moti Singh and Swaraj Puri under IPC sections 212 (harbouring offender) and 217 (public servant disobeying direction of law with intent to save person from punishment) and 221 (intentional omission to apprehend on the part of public servant bound to apprehend) of IPC. A toxic gas leaked from a pesticide factory of Union Carbide in Bhopal on the night of December 2-3, 1984 killed about 3,000 people immediately. Besides, thousands of others suffered adverse health effects.

Hitting hard on inflation

The inflation number looks uglier when we calculate core inflation, which is the headline number adjusted after removing sensitive items like food and fuel. Core inflation has been on an uptick since the beginning of the current fiscal and has remained at a higher level of 6.53 per cent in June 2018. Items like housing, education, health and recreation & amusement broadly form part of core inflation. Officially, the MPC does not talk of core inflation but this calculation forms its understanding of headline inflation, which is the target the MPC looks at. The red flags on inflation come against the backdrop of a comfortable outlook for economic growth, which stands above 7 per cent for the current fiscal and going up to 7.5 per cent in the first quarter of the fiscal year 2019-2020. Alongside, the output gap (the gap between potential output and actual output) has almost closed, indicating that the economy is producing near its potential. This comfort left the MPC solely focused on inflation and inflation expectations as the issue to be managed.

One of the worries outlined by the MPC is the increase in the Minimum Support Price (MSP) for agri produce, which could contribute to higher food inflation. This, alongside the high crude oil price, coupled with volatility in the financial markets, would also adversely impact the outlook on inflation. An even more worrisome feature is the household inflation expectation, which has risen sharply and has the potential to stimulate actual inflation outcome. Another adverse factor is the fiscal situation at the Centre and in the States. As recent evidence suggests, fiscal slippages (adverse deviations from the budget estimates) have been a rule rather than the exception. Such slippages are likely to negatively impact the inflation outlook, apart from the downsides like volatility in financial market and increased borrowing by governments, leading to "crowding out" of private investment.

Thus, there is a threat of inflation from three fronts: food inflation, fuel inflation and core inflation. When inflation persists and becomes all pervasive, the management of inflation becomes priority through a policy repo rate hike. The gold standard of policy is to beat the beast before it can raise its head, because once it does, it will require far more beating to tame it.

Yet, it bears looking at how today's action will find its way over time into the rate at which the banks lend to their customers. Normally, a change in policy repo rate works through the interest rate channel, moving from the shorter end of the market i.e. the call money rate (overnight interbank money market rate) to the longer end of the market (the rates for 10 year bonds) and then to the bank lending rate, where the pinch is felt by the customer. Evidence suggests that the increase in policy repo rate with some lag does impact the bank lending rate and discourage the demand for consumption. This could also impact investment. In other words, the policy repo rate hike and subsequent increase in bank lending rate, while moving the economy to a "disinflationary glide path" (to anchor inflation expectation), calls for some sacrifice, and this sacrifice comes in a lowering of economic growth.

However, the MPC's outlook on economic growth stands today at 7.5 per cent in Q1 of 2019-20, which reflects an optimistic bias. The hope that inflation can be lowered without sacrificing growth is likely to be in vain. One crucial aspect is the RBI's stance on liquidity management, which continues with a neutral stance. This means the RBI would work to keep liquidity in the system neither in deficit nor in surplus mode. But with two consecutive increases in the policy repo rate, adhering to a neutral stance may not be the best course of action because the system may require some accommodative stance as it adjusts to the tightening. In principle, the RBI remains committed to a neutral stance. The market has to therefore read and accordingly adjust cash management. The MPC assessment does not make any explicit mention on the currency movement in India. But we have a rising current account deficit and net capital outflows, which could impact currency movement and the liquidity management. Could the higher interest attract more dollars to India? This has to be seen in the context of the strengthening US economy, the US Fed rate hike and subsequent dollar appreciation. In an open and globalised economy, currency movement (through the exchange rate channel) also has a role to play in the transmission mechanism of monetary policy, and can impact the interest rate. This aspect merits attention, particularly in the context of the so-called impossible trinity. A country cannot have a free-corned solution - a fixed/flexible exchange rate, free capital mobility and independent monetary policy. One of the three has to give way. In sum, the decision by the MPC is the right step at the right time. It'll help meet the legislative mandate of the monetary policy, which is "price stability, keeping in mind growth."

Reports of sexual abuse, assault on inmates at Arrah juvenile home

ARRAH

Close on the heels of the Muzaffarpur shelter home sex scandal in Bihar, reports of alleged assault and sexual abuse of inmates at a remand home for juveniles came to light from Arrah today. Videos and photographs purportedly of inmates at the remand home in Dharhara locality, under the Town police station area, were played by regional news channels and shared on social media.

The remand home houses juveniles belonging to Bhojpur and three other adjoining districts. The videos and photographs showed some of the boys with bruises on their bodies and media reports claimed that some of them had also been sodomized.

Arrah SP Awakash Kumar said the there has been information about physical assault on a minor boy and further enquiry is underway. However, he refused to divulge further details. Police officials have rushed to the spot for investigation, though none of them was immediately available for further comments. Details like the number of inmates who faced any type of abuse were not known as yet and no FIR has been lodged in this connection yet.
